Faculty-Led & Customized Programs

IAU supports faculty-led and customized programs because they enable professors to create an international opportunity that meets their needs and those of their students.

Short-term faculty-led programs offer great educational value. However, they also require tremendous time and energy to organize. By taking advantage of IAU's existing infrastructure, including its facilities, student support services, and longstanding experience administering programs, students can participate in quality programs without overtaxing financial resources. Faculty can work with IAU staff to create a personalized itinerary that will ensure students have an impactful experience abroad.

IAU faculty-led and customized programs allow colleges and universities to:

- Expand study abroad offerings to increase access to a wider variety of program types
- Give faculty the opportunity to lead student groups overseas and internationalize curriculum
- Present students with flexible study abroad options that meet academic needs and graduation requirements
- Tap into IAU's existing infrastructure for classrooms, excursions, and homestays and engage with IAU's network of academics and local experts

IAU can provide the following services, each customized to meet particular needs:

- Academic Support
  - › Panel discussions and guest lectures from field specialists
  - › Excursions and daytrips to enhance course curriculum
  - › Engagement with international businesses and organizations
  - › Collaboration with local universities and students
  - › Option to incorporate existing IAU courses into program structure
  - › Academic internships and field placements
- Logistical support
  - › Accommodations including hotels, homestays, apartments, and student residences
  - › IAU classrooms, student study spaces, libraries, and computer labs
  - › 24/7 on-site student and faculty support services
  - › Enrollment and pre-departure support
  - › Comprehensive international insurance
