

IAU SUMMER TROUBADOUR #2

« Time flies over us, but leaves its shadow behind. »
Nathaniel Hawthorne

Chers Etudiants,

Un grand nombre d'entre vous allez bientôt partir. La session B, qui ne dure que trois semaines, s'achève ce vendredi. On va ainsi se dire au revoir pour cet été. Comme disent les français, « Ne disons pas 'au revoir' mais disons 'à bientôt' ». As we told you on that Monday, June 5, the term would go by quickly. There are still a few days left and for many of you a few weeks, but don't forget how quickly it has gone by so far and keep in mind how quickly these next weeks will go by. Our hope is that you will begin even now to take stock of where things stand and what your time here will have brought you by the time it is your turn to depart. Though we can be rightly suspicious of « motivational speakers, » it is certainly worth considering Michael Altshuler's point : 'The bad news is time flies. The good news is you're the pilot.' You are the principal actor in this process and thus the only one ultimately responsible for the value of your experience. There is plenty of support should you desire to dig more deeply into what your experience offers you long-term, but the initiative will be yours to take. Whether you are here until the end of the week or still have a few weeks to go, we incite all of you to continue exploring both geographically and intellectually.

Passez une excellente semaine,
Leigh Smith
Dean of IAU
